Being an FCC Provider

This is more than being a “babysitter”. You are a professionally trained child/youth caregiver in a continuously growing, high demand career field. As a business owner, you will experience the challenges and rewards of being self-employed while receiving support and guidance by the FCC Office with 48th Force Support Squadron.

The Basic Requirements To Become An FCC Provider:

- Be 18 years of age or older
- Be an Active Duty or retired military dependent
- Speak, read and write English
- Live in military housing
- Attend 40 hours of orientation
- Have a high school diploma or equivalent
- Proof of immunizations
- Certification in FA/CPR Infant/Child
- FCC provider and family members must complete a background investigation

Getting Started

If you meet these basic requirements, then you can begin your career as an FCC Provider. The FCC office will guide you through the certification process and assist you with establishing your business. All training requirements mandated by Air Force Instruction 34-144 for FCC Providers will be provided prior to the home being certified. Training will include child abuse identification and reporting, appropriate guidance and discipline techniques, food handlers, medication administration, CPR and first aid, FCC business administration, basic child development and learning environments, and safety, health and fire regulations. In addition, you will complete 15 specialized modules that will educate you on everything from home safety and health to setting up your environment during your first 18 months of certification.
